Radionics is a method of distant healing by means of a device, with extrasensory perception is used. This way, a trained and competent users to cause a disease (living within each system, be it a human, an animal, plant or the earth itself) reveal. Useful therapeutic energy and information can be made available to patients, to help achieve optimum health. Radionics was founded by Dr. Albert Abrams (1863-1924), a doctor from San Francisco discovered, and by several other researchers and experts, as Ruth Drown, George de la Warr, T. Galen Hieronymus, Malcolm Rae and David Tansley developed.

The basis of all American radio theory and practice based on the fact that we all spring from a common ground, so that we are embedded in the electromagnetic field of the earth. Furthermore, each life form their own electromagnetic field, which is when it is distorted to a greater extent, produces as a result of illness. If one accepts that everything is energy, Radionics sees organs, diseases and drugs as their own institution of specific frequencies or vibrations. This fact can also be expressed numerically (radionically: Council, Eng. = Measurement, ratio, rate). Radio Technical instruments are equipped with switches, with which set the rates for diagnostic and therapeutic purposes can be.

The practitioner uses his radionic radiesthetic skills, when performing an analysis of a patient, as he combines his ability to extrasensory perception with the problem of finding disease, just like a dowser locates water, oil or minerals. The particular form of extrasensory perception, which is used for Radionics is often referred to as radiesthetic ability, through which the practitioner, through a series specifically asked questions, information about the health of a patient receives, the one conscious thinking brain would not be accessible.
