Immunotherapy with Spenglersan colloids For Spenglersan colloids are microbiological, homeopathic immune modulators that are used in alternative medicine use. They are made of antigens and antitoxins of different strains of bacteria and multiplies assembled on D9. The colloids are Spenglersan it since the beginning of the 20th Century. They have been developed by Dr. Carl Spengler, a famous Swiss surgeon and researcher and co-workers, Robert Koch, the discoverer of the tuberculosis bacteria.

Gamble Spenglersan colloids The Spenglersan colloids are percutaneously via spray application to application, ie they are at a rather delicate skin with the thumb rubbed by the patient. This may be the elbow, the inside of the thigh or the abdominal skin. In the regulation of several colloids the application is made at a distance of about two hours. In the mucosal application, the secondary lymphoid organs such as Waldeyer's ring with palatine tonsil, pharyngeal tonsil and lingual tonsil can be achieved. In the sublingual absorption of the drug is achieved wide circulation directly, avoiding a first-pass metabolism in the liver.

Spenglersan effect of colloids The Spenglersan colloids should cause due to a number of different antigenic determinants of a erregerunspezifische stimulation and modulation of the cellular immune system, by stimulating the phagocytic activity and cytotoxicity of macrophages, NK cells and cytotoxic T-lymphocytes, induction and regulation of cytokines and adhesion molecules, Regulation of inflammatory reactions, and alteration of the microcirculation. Based on the fact that many diseases in mixed infections, disorders of the body's defenses, such as hypo-and hyper-reactivity of the immune system (regulatory weakness blockade,) are based, such as infections, cancer, allergic diseases, rheumatic diseases, autoimmune diseases, etc. - is for the Spenglersan colloids a wide range of indications claimed. Treatment with the Spenglersan colloids is well tolerated and side effects.
